

Rationale
Score: 0	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Response identifies an idea and provides an undeveloped explanation of whether or not the idea is relevant to teenagers today.<ul style="list-style-type: none">– “The idea I believe is to never give up. Keep doing the best you can but don’t be a sad winner or loser.”– “. . . lots of them do not try their hardest at most things but even when they do they don’t try as hard as they could.”– “They don’t have time for failure so they push as hard as they can to succeed.”	Score: 2	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Response identifies an idea and provides a clear and developed explanation of whether or not the idea is relevant to teenagers today.<ul style="list-style-type: none">– “The idea I selected is that if you really work to achieve greatness, the journey took will, with all its hardships, make you a strong, more mature person.”– “But those who strive to overcome their biggest and most impossible barriers will emerge feeling truly accomplished and wise.”– “There are only some really fit for the journey, and we see it in the young olympic athletes, the school presidents, and the activists around the world”	Score: 4	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Response identifies an idea and provides a thorough explanation of whether or not the idea is relevant to teenagers today.<ul style="list-style-type: none">– “. . . I don’t think teenagers can relate to war itself, but more the attitude and feelings.– “If you replace the idea of war with growing up, it shows how things were simple as child, peaceful. Nothing to worry about, carefree.– “Then the second season relate to the change. The change of becoming a teenager . . .”– “The duration is just surviving getting through or waiting like ‘holding your breath.’ You just need to get through and do your best as you are growing up.– “After the war means after the change of going from a child to an adult.”	Score: 5